Miner Suddenly Dies After Drinking Glass of Hot Milk

Passes Away With Statement That He Is About to Take Big Sleep

"That touches the spot. Now for the big sleep."

With these words, Lee Banghart, a well known miner, died in his room at the home of James Anderson at 9 o'clock last night, after drinking a glass of hot milk.

Banghart had been suffering from pneumonia for the past three days. He had received medical attention and was apparently not dangerously ill. Last night he was feeling well enough to take nourishment and, accordingly, requested Mrs. Anderson to prepare a glass of hot milk for him.

He drank the milk with evident satisfaction. Hardly had he spoken the words, "Now for the big sleep," when he fell back in bed a corpse. He had indeed entered upon that slumber from which there is no awakening.

Banghart was a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the funeral services will be held under the auspices of that order, although funeral arrangements had not been made as yet.

The deceased had resided in Globe for about six years. He was unmarried and is said to have relatives in Prescott, who will be informed of his death at once.

PRIEST DIES FROM BLOOD POISONING

Contracted Taint in Giving Holy Sacrament

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 25.— Rev. John Boersig of Madison, is dead of blood poisoning, contracted while administering the sacrament to a dying parishioner a year ago. The disease was contracted by the inoculation of his fingers, which touched the dying parishioner's lips.

FOSSIL BEDS OF THE GREEN RIVER

The fossil beds of Green River are the largest in the United States, being far superior to the Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado and Grand Canon diggings.

From all indications the Green River beds must have been a regular burial ground for the prehistoric monsters.

Prof. Earl Douglas of the Carnegie museum, located in Pittsburgh, carried on operations all summer in the above-mentioned field and as a result has made one of the greatest of finds.

The importance to science of these fossil beds was scarcely known until one year ago. Prof. Douglas spent the summer between Dragoon and Vernal.
While digging in this area, south of Vernal, he found, packed, and shipped, large consignments of rare specimens.

Seven miles above Jensen, Prof.
Douglas discovered the tail and hind parts of a huge dinosaur. As work progressed it was found to be a perfect skeleton, including the head. Conservative estimates give the reptile's size to be 65 ft. long and 16 ft. high. Since uncovering this one he has found one other large and two small ones. In other words, Prof. Douglas has found a nest of the dinosaurs.

This fossil field covers a large area in the Uintah Basin, reaching as far south as the Book mountains.

About Clean Mouths

It is most surprising to meet children who are the very quintessence of cleanliness as far as dress and phisical hair ribbons are concerned but whose mouths are veritable culture tubes for disease germs; the parents of these children never give the matter a thought, and not until the pangs of toothache disturb the peace of their child do they realize that a diseased condition exists.
If the parent can afford dental treatment the child is given relief, but if the parents are poor the child is in many instances allowed to suffer without even sympathy.

The suffering of childhood must and does appeal to our human instincts, but the actual pain realized is of least concern to all except the little sufferer.
He alone bears the pain, but all his associates must share in the morbid about his suffering. Is it for the welfare of the child that we sit idly by and maintain an inhuman silence while the ravaging of disease which finds its inception in an unhygienic condition of the mouth and teeth manifest themselves, not alone in the unsuccessful effort of the poor and uncared-for child, but also result in disease transmission manifesting itself in the mind and body of the child whose home life perhaps furnishes luxury?

CUDAHY ARRIVES AT PASADENA

PASADENA, Cal., March 25.—Jack Cudahy, the millionaire, who had the sensational encounter with Jere Lillis arrived this afternoon from Kansas City. He gave the Pullman porter a dollar to open a door on the far side to escape friends and interviewers alike, and rushed to his father's palatial home, where he went into seclusion, in which he will remain, he said, until the way is paved to return to his family.

Lillis is also on his way here, but was not on the same train with Cudahy.

RULES COMMITTEE GOES INTO OFFICE

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25.— Without incident the new rules committee, with Cannon eliminated, went into office today. Currier made a motion for the ayes and nays, to put the insurgents on record. There were numerous protests and only a handful rose to support the motion. Cannon then declared the vote unanimous, thus putting the insurgents in the light of voting with the regular slate.

SENATORS FUSS ON RECLAMATION SUBJECT

Heyburn Resents Intimation That His Remarks Are
Mere Drivel

Senators Warren and Heyburn clashed in the senate today over an effort on the part of the former to obtain the passage of a bill authorizing the sale of surplus water under irrigation and reclamation projects. The Idaho senator objected to the enactment of such a law as contrary to the constitution and laws of his state.

Mr. Heyburn took the floor with the avowed purpose of talking on the bill until some other measure should naturally come up under the rules of the senate. After he had spoken for an hour or more, Mr. Warren, who sat near him, made a remark in soto voce, that the Idaho senator's speech was mere drivel.

The remark aroused Mr. Heyburn's ire.
"The time is coming," he shouted,
"when this sort of thing must cease.
The assumption that because one man has been here longer than another, he can direct the course of the other, is intolerable."

"Another recruit to the ranks of the insurgents," remarked some senator on the democratic side, but Mr. Heyburn ended his speech without replying. He saw in the bill an effort to place all irrigation projects under government control.

Senator Borah favored the bill.

ROOSEVELT VISITS SACRED TOMBS

Chased by Moving Picture Outfit Eager to Take Films of Party

CAIRO, Egypt, March 25.—Mounted on camels tendered from the khedive's camel train, a mark of special favor, Roosevelt and his son today visited Necropolis Sakkarah, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and Ethel in a more comfortable conveyance.

They explored the ancient tombs of kings and sacred bulls, returned tonight, dined with Consul General Id-dings, and then attended a banquet in their honor given by Sir Eldon Gest, British representative.

While at Necropolis the privacy of the party was invaded by moving picture men, who rolled yard after yard of films as Roosevelt hustled ahead of the party, who had a hard time to keep up with him.

The ex-president was met by Oscar Straus, minister to Turkey. He denied any political significance in the visit.
Three hundred American visitors sent greetings to Roosevelt today. The hotel's never before were so crowded.
Kaiser, is here and hopes to see Rosevelt.
